Dear June,

Mr. Collings very obligingly stopped home today, so that I'm able to give myself time off to write to you.

However nothing exciting has happened to write about this week so far. It makes you feel like setting fire to the building, or putting a bomb under the Town Hall, or something.

Wednesday was just a routine day of getting out of bed going to work, going to an hour show, going to school, going home, and going to bed. I did see Mabel however, on Thursday, but she seemed very conscientious about getting back to work in time. I was just coming out of Dbyuz where I heard they were giving free X-rays - looking for T.B. or something - I thought that yours truly might just as well be in it; it helped to fill in the lunch hour anyway.

I'm afraid I'm going to have rather a dull time Saturday night, because the fact that Mr. Collings has a cold and I gave him the day off means that I won't get paid till Monday now. However if I had a year's salary tomorrow night, I still couldn't enjoy myself as much as if you were here. I look forward to going out with you on Saturday night and Sunday, and miss your funny face when you're not around.

It's a good job it's only for a week, and not a month.

They are running a card evening at the church tomorrow night, to which I really should, and probably will go.

I hope to hear in the letter that you will no doubt be sending by return mail, how you are getting on up there.

I should have worded Stan up to lock you in at night, and not let you speak to strange men; however I expect that the baby has been keeping you busy. Speaking of babies, I hear that Mr and Mrs Egri Owen from Auburn Grove have put their order in for one, and expect a 1948 model.

There's work to be done, so I'd better close, after all some of us have to work. Please give my regards to Stan, Lorna, and Margaret, not forgetting Winifred. Have a good time yourself, but don't stop too long.

Yours Truly
 Glyn
